

The online psychotherapy (or psychology) is a modern method of remote counseling therapy. In fact, it is no different from traditional psychotherapy and offers tremendous benefits in many cases. Thanks to the flexibility of this method, the enhanced privacy and the fact that it is globally recognized and accepted, online psychologists are preferred by a large number of people all over the world.

In particular, online psychotherapy is the best choice for:

- Cases where the place of residence of the patient does not offer the possibility to visit a psychologist.
- People who are constantly on the move and want to complete a treatment with the same psychologist.
- People with special needs, as well as people with mobility difficulties due to health problems, hospitalization, etc.
- People who are focusing on their privacy and do not want to go to a psychologist's office because of social criticism.

The business model

This model connects the customer who has a need for psychological services and the corresponding expert (e.x. psychologist or psychiatrist) through a virtual private and confidential online environment. In this environment the above members interact with each other through chat, video and audio. The flow of the model is as follows. The customer schedules an appointment through the platform and pays for it. The appointment takes place at the designated day and time inside the platform and upon completion the platform makes the payment to the expert deducting the platforms fee.
